Originally we introduced our jewelry findings for mounting textiles, especially for our silk painter customers who have a lot of scraps and do not know what to do with them. But as you will find out later, many of our customers use these items in order to frame different art works.

Each jewelry piece comes with a metal or copper plate, which fits, into the setting. You can glue your hand-painted, cross-stitched, needlepointed, quilted or other artworks over the plate.

Cut the fabric a little larger than the plate, spray glue on the surface of the plate, and stretch your fabric on the plate. Spray the glue into the back of the plate; fold the raw fabric over the edges around the bottom of the plate. Glue the back of the covered plate into the setting. Or put the covered plate into a pronged setting and bend the prongs down to hold the piece in place.

The findings come in many different sizes and shapes. Some are complete necklaces, earring and bracelets with one or more settings, ready to wear as soon as you add fabric. The selection includes earrings, pendants, brooches, bola slides and even lipstick cases with mirror, picture frames, business card holders and pillboxes. Next time you hear a cross-stitcher moaning about how she doesn't have any more wall space for her creations, tell her she can wear her next cross-stitch project.

The copper plates are especially used for enameling glass powders that are cured in oven, stone setting, resins, glass beads and different clays, beautiful papers, and much more.

From upper left: decorative paper, painted with gold on black background, silk painting, the heart in left is a special mixture of

The pillboxes on the top left is decorated with dry flowers protected with resin, next is wood inlay, the other two boxes are decorated with Russian fairytale miniature paintings.

The irises are specially painted for the pendant. The blue silk painted piece covers the metal that will be inserted in the brooch.

Bellow many different techniques are used for the brooches and pendants like: Russian miniature, silk painting, glass fusing, different clays, painted on porcelain, marbling on fabric, enamel on copper plate with liquid gold, African Malakai stone, cloisone painting, décor and resin.

Different porcelain pieces are also available that can be painted on and replaced instead of the metal shapes.

Important: With our experience we have found that “Adhesive mount spray glue” from 3M is a very good spray, especially if wet marks are seen on the fabric after it is glued and dry no stains marks remain on the fabric. The E6000 is also our best choice to glue metal plates to the findings. It is a great glue for metal to metal.

This is a beautiful piece, the Victorian roses are created with dyed silk ribbons and sewn by stitching.

All these jewelry pieces are made with metal and brass that are plated with 24 karats gold. A special lacquer covers the items that protect them against rust, time and contact against the skin. Some pieces are available in silver colors too. Our classical design jewelry fit for everyday use as well as special occasions.

We have added three other lines that differ from the items above. One group has more of modern designs.

Another new line has an extra glass piece, so when the fabric is placed on the metal the glass covers over the fabric so it looks like a framed work that protects the artwork.

The glass can be seen on the fabric.
